Embedded Librarianship in Professional Programs

Nadine Hoffman, University of Calgary

Rhiannon Jones, University of Calgary

Caitlin McClurg, University of Calgary

This panel looks critically at the term “embedded,” suggests ways the definition evolved in the literature to reflect practices, and discusses how embedded librarians are represented in a professional capacity. Panel members investigate how the literature describes strengthening collaborative relationships for professional programs, and embedding beyond learning management systems, emphasizing special and academic libraries for research and instruction endeavours. Factors such as relationships with faculty, educational needs of students, and integration of technology are also explored.
